

LORD SACKVILLE DOESN'T CARE.

THE BRITISH MINISTER ACKNOWLEDGES THAT HE WROTE THE LOS ANGELES LETTER.

EXTREMELY FRIENDLY TOWARD MR. CLEVELAND'S ADMINISTRATION—NOT IN THE LEAST AFRAID THAT HIS RECALL WILL BE DEMANDED.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.)

Washington, Oct. 23.—Lord Sackville, the British Minister, was seen by The Tribune correspondent to-day in reference to the letter printed in yesterday's Tribune in a dispatch from Los Angeles, alleged to have been written by him to an American citizen of English birth, who had asked the Minister's advice as to how he should vote at the coming election. Lord Sackville is a man rather under the average height, but with a compactly built figure, and with an activity of movement that one would hardly expect from a person of his years—he must be somewhere in the sixties. His hair grows only upon the back and sides of his well-shaped head, and his forehead is broad and full. His face is strongly marked, showing intelligence and shrewdness, with his eyes are clear and searching. His gray mustache and whiskers are carefully trimmed, the latter being brought to a point and not ported in the centre, as is the style much affected by Englishmen. His manner is easy and affable, his speech quick and concise. He has a curious habit of giving one a sharp glance and then looking away as he talks, as if he were first trying to read the thoughts of his auditor and then thinking what the effect of his own words would be. He never loses command of himself or the subject under discussion, but is always calm and self-contained, and although his manner may be frank and open, there is an impression on the part of his listener, if he be at all observant, that the very amiable diplomat is not saying any more than is absolutely necessary to impart the information sought.

It will readily be seen how the handling of Secretary Bayard by a man of Lord Sackville's ability would be mere child's play. Mr. Bayard is a plain, every-day sort of person, never having been accused of particular brilliancy, and if he had hailed from any other State than Delaware, it is doubtful if he would have cut much of a figure in public life. He is not quick of comprehension, and when he was made Secretary of State had no experience in domestic diplomacy.

IT DOES NOT MATCH FOR SACKVILLE.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that so shrewd and able a diplomat as Lord Sackville should easily outwitted Mr. Bayard in regard to the Fisheries question, or, in fact, in reference to any matter in which England and the United States were both interested. This was the case at the very outset of Mr. Cleveland's Administration. Mr. Bayard was completely outwitted by the British Minister, was placed in a false position for the interests of this country, and made promises in regard to the settlement of the questions at issue which he could not fulfill, and which were repudiated by Congress. From that beginning have come all the differences surrounding the Fisheries question. Lord Sackville has been master of the situation in every phase of the negotiations up to the time of the rejection of the treaty by the Senate. It is perfectly natural, therefore, that he should have a kindly feeling for an Administration which he could control, and that he should desire its continuance in power.

To-day the Minister was dressed in a black velvet sack coat, with waistcoat of the same material, and dark striped trousers. He walked up and down the room during the interview, and gave his answers in a quick, jerky manner. When asked if the Los Angeles letter was genuine, he replied that it was.

"Was the gentleman who wrote to you a friend?" asked The Tribune correspondent.

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I never saw him or heard of him until I received his letter. He wrote asking my advice, and other people do, and I have to give them my opinion."

"Did you expect that your letter would find its way into print?"

"Oh, indeed? especially as I marked it private. But now that it is published, I don't care."

"What do you think of the suggestion in 'The New-York Sun' to-day that if the letter is genuine Secretary Bayard should immediately send Lord Sackville a copy?"

Lord Sackville had not read the article referred to, and when it was handed to him, he perused it carefully, with a smile upon his face, and then said:

"I am not alarmed at that threat. There has been so much said about me in the past that I have become indifferent to such comments. I am sorry to hear that you have taken any subject in which I was interested, as I had a perfect right to do. I answered him giving him my views upon the matter, as I had a right to do. That's all that I can say. I don't feel at all uneasy over the demand for your recall?"

"Oh, dear, no. I have done nothing that is at all prejudicial to my position or that is a violation of any treaty or of courtesy."

"Has anything been done in regard to the Fisheries question since the rejection of the treaty by the Senate?"

"No, Sir. Since that time matters have been at a standstill on both sides. Of course, I understand that both the action of the Senate and the President's letter of retaliation were for political effect. In a general election it is not surprising that every point should be seized upon by both parties which would have an effect upon the voters. It is not at all likely that any trouble will result over this Fisheries matter. It will be amicably adjusted in the end."

CANADIAN ANNEXATION DISCUSSED.

"Do you think there is any growing sentiment in Canada in favor of annexation to the United States?"

"No, I do not. I have not been in Canada for a year, but I do not believe that the tie to the mother country is in any degree lessened. Canada is practically independent, like Australia and New Zealand. It has its own Government and is not interfered with by the home power."

"But the British Parliament could control Canadian affairs if it wanted to?"

"Yes, it could; but it does not, and is not likely to do so. The Canadians like the tie to the mother country and have no desire to have it severed."

"How do the methods of our present Secretary of State compare with those of his predecessor?"

"There is a very little difference between them. Of course, the routine business of the State Department is transacted by the same persons who were during the administration of Mr. Bayard. There are some changes in that Department made from time to time. A change in the head of a department makes no difference in the methods of transacting its business. Of course, transacting it makes different manners and thoughts, and modes of expression; but that is all the difference that a change in the head of the State Department makes."

"Are there any rumors that you are to be transferred to another post of duty shortly?"

"If there is, I do not know it. I am very well satisfied where I am. I have been here a long time. I am very pleasantly situated, and have no desire to make a change. This is a beautiful city, the people are the best that I have ever met, and I have made many warm friends. I will," said the correspondent, as the interview was brought to a close; "then there is nothing more that you wish to say, either in reference to the Los Angeles letter or the demand for your recall?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I wrote what I believed in the former, and I shall give myself no uneasiness about the latter."

MRS. W. K. VANDERBILT'S NEWPORT PLACE.

New-York letter to The Detroit Tribune.

A social sandwich, made of two slices of Astor for bread and one of Vanderbilt for meat, has just been made in plainer words, William K. Vanderbilt has purchased a quarter of a million, the villa and grounds, hitherto belonging to A. G. Stout, at Newport, and the next morning on one side of the place is William Astor, and on the other William K. Vanderbilt. This trifling bit of architecture and land is a birthday gift by Vanderbilt to his brightly and handsome wife. The new estate is a masterpiece of building from the hunting villa of Scotland to the regularly civilized corner of Fifth-ave. and Fifty-second-st. Each establishment is complete in itself, with fine furniture, and all the outfit necessary to luxurious habitation.

PLANS OF ACTORS AND MANAGERS.

Al. Hayman and William Gillette have decided to consolidate all of their "Shoe" companies this winter, making one big "Shoe" combination for the remainder of the season. It will embrace nearly 100 people, mostly shoes.

A coolness is said to have sprung up between Rudolph Aronson and Pauline Hall, who is now singing with one of the Casino road companies at Boston. The story of their differences is to the effect that Miss Hall understood that Mr. Aronson had promised to furnish her with two new "Nadly" costumes for use on her tour, though no mention of it was made in their written contract. Mr. Aronson, on the other hand, cannot recall having made such a promise. Miss Hall, however, insists that he agreed to do so, and the matter has been hanging over the heads of the two since. Miss Hall declined to compromise on such terms, and hinted darkly at following the example set by other prominent members of the Casino forces. All this is of recent occurrence, and as no adjustment of the differences has yet been made, more may be heard from the "Nadly" ever. Miss Hall is still singing in the "Nadly" company, but Mr. Aronson is in Chicago looking after the production there of "The Yeomen of the Guard."

The fifth performance of "Fascination" was celebrated at the Foy's Grand Theatre last night with a special ceremony. No souvenirs were given, but the interior of the theatre presented a brilliant appearance, with many colored lights, festoons of flowers and flags, banners and streamers of every description. The entrance to the house and the tall columns outside were also resplendent with bunting and transparencies. The last performance of "Fascination" will be given on Saturday night.
